Atlantic Centre's Participation in the 110th Session of the Maritime Safety Committee, organized by the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in London

On 18 and 19 June, the Atlantic Centre (AC), represented by its Coordinator, Rear Admiral Nuno de Noronha Bragança, participated in the 110th session of the Maritime Safety Committee of the International Maritime Organization (IMO), in London.

On this occasion, the AC presented its work in the field of maritime security in the Atlantic, strengthening its role as a platform for multilateral dialogue and cooperation.

The AC highlighted the importance of regional coordination, international partnerships, and the reinforcement of multilateral institutions to ensure maritime security and environmental protection. This participation contributed to strengthening the relationship between the AC and the IMO, opening new opportunities for future cooperation.
